INTRODUCTION

This appeal is about the final decision and effect of the United States Supreme Court’s decision, Jesinoski vs Countrywide Home Loans, 135 S.Ct. 790 (2015)(“Jesinoski”). In 2015, the United States Supreme Court decided the matter of Jesinoski vs Countrywide Home Loans, 135 S.Ct. 790 (2015). This decision finally clarified the rescission rights of the parties under the Truth in Lending Act (“TILA”) 15 U.S.C 1601. Per Jesinoski, Appellant, Mr. Paatalo, rescinded the loan on his property in Oregon, by sending a letter to the predecessor of Appellee, Washington Mutual Bank, F.A., the original lender. The lender did nothing after receiving the letter, and acquiesced.

Appellee and the lower Court have previously agreed that

1 Appellant timely rescinded his loan with Washington Mutual Bank, 2 F.A., now succeeded by J.P. Morgan Chase Bank. However, the district 3 court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment, stating that 4 Plaintiff had to show he had a conditional right to rescind the loan 5 under TILA, and that the settlement agreement entered into between 6 the parties was valid. ER 7 This contradicts the ruling in both 7 Jesinoski and Yamamoto vs. Bank of New York, 329 F. 23d. 1167, which 8 held that when the creditor acquiesces or fails to respond within the 20 9 (twenty) day response period, rescission is accomplished automatically 10 when the consumer has given notice. No such condition is imposed 11 either by statute or by interpretation. The lower court erred in 12 imposing one. This case is simply that direct.

13 The Appellee provides many inapplicable arguments to obfuscate 14 the issue. Many of their arguments have been put forth in the lower 15 court and denied. The lack of jurisdiction argument is brought here for 16 the first time since 2015. The Appellee itself states in its brief (page 40) 17 that if an argument is made here for the first time it is waived.
18 Taniguchi vs. Schults, 303 F. 3d 950 (9th Circuit 2002). Then applying 19 their argument, the jurisdiction argument is also waived.

20
21 The lower court erred in interpreting a settlement agreement 22 between the parties as having effected Appellant's rescission. This is 23 contrary to basic contract law. A contract is voidable if it violates public 24 policy. Bagley v. Mt. Bachelor, Inc., dba Mt. Bachelor Ski and Summer 25 Resort, 2014 Ore. LEXIS 99. To the extent the Settlement Agreement

1 between the parties is being used to deprive Appellant of his rights
2 under Jesinoski, the agreement is voidable.

3 However, the District Court upheld the Settlement Agreement
4 (“Release”) which could not contemplate Jesinoski, and became contrary
5 to law at its adoption. Thus, the lower court negated Appellant’s 6 rescission.

7 8 Despite the efforts of Appellee to rewrite history, and spin the 9 facts, this appeal is about the validity and effect of rescission under 10 Jesinoski. The lower court erred in holding the settlement agreement 11 had an effect upon TILA and Jesinoski, when it preempted the 12 settlement agreement rendering it void as to public policy.

13 II.

14 ARGUMENT

15 A. THE PLAIN LANGUAGE OF JESINOSKI

16 Jesinoski says plainly that “the language leaves no doubt that 17 rescission is effective when the borrower notifies the creditor of his 18 intention to rescind. “The Court also says that there is no condition 19 precedent to rescission at law, and that the act does not imply rescission 20 in equity. 2 D. Dobbs, Law of Remedies § 9.3(3). “The clear import of 21 1635(a) is that a borrower need only provide written notice to a lender 22 in order to exercise his right to rescind. This is all Appellant was 23 required to do.

24
25 To validly exercise the right of rescission, the consumer also is 1 required to let the creditor know that he or she is rescinding the 2 transaction. 12 C.F.R. §226.23(a)(2). The notice needs to be given “by 3 mail, telegram, or other means of written communication.” Id. When the 4 consumer mailed the notice of rescission, even if the creditor didn’t 5 honor the rescission within the deadline, the consumer didn’t have to 6 take any additional action, such as bringing a lawsuit to enforce the 7 right of rescission. Cocroft v. HSBC Bank USA, N.A., No. 10C3408, 8 2012 WL 1378645, *4 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 20, 2012)

9 Once the consumer validly rescinds the transaction, the security
10 interest giving rise to the right of rescission becomes void. 12. C.F.R. § 11 226.23(d)(1). In addition, the consumer is no longer liable for any 12 amount, including any finance charge. Id.

13 If the creditor receives the notice of rescission from the consumer, 14 the creditor is required to return “any money or property that has been 15 given to anyone in connection with the transaction,” within 20 calendar 16 days after such receipt. 12 C.F.R. § 226.23(d)(2). In addition, the 17 creditor needs to take “any action necessary to reflect the termination of 18 the security interest.” 12 C.F.R. § 226.23(d)(2). Note that, while the 19 regulation and § 1635(b) refer to the termination of “security interest,” § 20 1635(a) refers to a “right to rescind the transaction,” not just a right to 21 rescind the security interest. Handy v. Anchor Mortg. Corp., 464 F.3d 22 760, 765 (7th Cir. 2006).

23 It is patently clear that the Court was aware in 2015 of FIRREA, 24 and did not make any exception to its ruling, as Appellee would argue 25 that rescission once accomplished, still forced the borrower to make a

1 claim under FIRREA. Jesinoski held that as long as rescission was 2 accomplished by written notice, the borrower did not have to bring a 3 lawsuit before the end of the three-year period. The Supreme Court 4 imposed no other condition upon the notice. It certainly did not impose 5 FIRREA conditions.

6 7 B. APPELLANT HAS PROVEN RESCISSION

8 9 The lower court found that under Section 1635, once notice of 10 rescission has been provided, the creditor must either begin the 11 unwinding process by returning the borrower's money and taking action 12 to reflect the termination of the security interest, or filing a lawsuit to 13 dispute the Plaintiff's right to rescind. Appellee did neither.

14
15 If the Appellee did neither, according to the lower court, within 16 the statute of limitations of TILA, "rescission and voiding of the security 17 interest are effective as a matter of law as of the date of the notice." The 18 burden of filing a lawsuit challenging the rescission is upon the creditor.

20 Appellee did not challenge the rescission and therefore there was 21 no claim to be made under FIRREA. Any security interest was 22 extinguished.

24 The lower court denied the argument of the Appellee by denying 25 its motion to dismiss. "Case 6:15-cv-01420-AA Document 12 Filed 11/12/15 Page 18 of 18.

1 “The timing of Jesinoski is also significant. Although foreclosing 2 trustees and purchasers at trustee’s sales have a significant interest in 3 finality, consumers have a countervailing interest in avoiding wrongful 4 foreclosure. Jesinoski revealed the majority of federal courts had 5 “misinterpreted the will of the enacting Congress,” Rivers vs. Roadway
6 Express 511 U.S. 298 (1994), in allocating to borrowers the burden to go 7 to court to enforce their statutory rescission rights under TILA. Further 8 factual development is necessary to determine what effect that 9 revelation should have on the property rights of subsequent buyers of 10 the property.”

11 12 “Defendant’s motion to dismiss is denied with leave for defendant to 13 renew its arguments about the effect of the trustee’s sale.”

14
15 CONCLUSION

16 Defendant’s motion to dismiss (doc. 6) is DENIED. Defendant’s request 17 for oral argument is DENIED as unnecessary.

18 IT IS SO ORDERED.

19 Dated this 12th Day November 2015.”

20 The lower court was aware of the Jesinoski case and “the will of 21 the enacting Congress. “ The parties and the Court agreed that the 22 Plaintiff rescinded the loan. Now the Appellee argues before this court 23 that notice was not enough. This defies Jesinoski. The facts have 24 established conclusively that Mr. Paatalo notified the creditor 25 (borrowers must “notify the creditor” of their intention to rescind the 1 loan within three years) timely. The court found that in the Order ER 2 2.

3 The lower court specifically found in ER 2, “Taking the allegations 4 in the complaint as true, if those notices actually rescinded the loan, 5 plaintiff’s complaint will survive the motion to dismiss. If, on the other 6 hand, notice of intent to exercise the conditional right of rescission did 7 not actually effect the rescission, defendant is entitled to dismissal.
8 This is error.

9 The Supreme Court answered this question in Jesinoski. A 10 unanimous Court declared "rescission is effected when the borrower 11 notifies the creditor of his intention to rescind." Jesinoski, 135 S. Ct. at 12 792 (emphasis added).

13 In the granting of the Defendant’s summary judgment motion 14 however, the lower court said something very different. It found:

15 “To prevail on his claims, plaintiff must show that he had a 16 conditional right to rescind the loan and that he exercised that right 17 within the relevant timeframe.” ER 7

18 This is clearly not what Jesinoski has said. No such condition 19 was imposed by Justice Scalia in this decision. The lower court is 20 simply wrong and erred in placing a condition upon Plaintiff.
21

22 Furthermore, the lower court itself agreed with Appellant, about 23 the facts and the law, in its prior order denying the Defendant’s Motion 24 to Dismiss. ER 2. It was irrelevant what happened after the rescission, 25 according to the Supreme Court in Jesinoski. The settlement

1 agreement cannot change the fact of rescission, and it is moot. The 2 court itself stated that Jesinoski was not retroactively applying law, it 3 was simply explaining what the statute meant.

4 The defendant could not show that it was entitled to judgment as 5 a matter of law, but the Plaintiff could. The Jesinoski case clarified 6 these issues so that Plaintiff rescinded the contract upon notice, and 7 upon the failures of Washington Mutual Bank. There is simply no 8 argument to be made that there is a genuine issue of material fact.
9 Neither WMB or J.P. Morgan Chase contested the rescission, nor did 10 J.P. Morgan Chase counter-claim for its force and effect. It did just as 11 Washington Mutual had done, it acquiesced. Therefore, Jesinoski gave 12 summary judgment to Appellant.

13
14 C. THE SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT DID NOT 15 CONTEMPLATE THE RIGHTS OF THE BORROWER IN JESINOSKI
16 AND SUMMARY JUDGMENT WAS ERROR

17 A release is a contract and is subject to the ordinary rules of 18 contract construction and interpretation. Ristau v. Wescold, Inc., 318
19 Or. 383, 387, 868 P.2d 1331 (1994). If the terms of the release 20 unambiguously express the intent of the parties, it must be enforced 21 accordingly. Inherent in the purpose of a release agreement is a promise 22 to abandon a claim or right that is within the contemplation of the 23 parties. Lindgren v. Berg, 307 Or. 659, 665, 772 P.2d 1336 (1989).
24 Before a release is valid, there must be both the knowledge of the 25 existence of the claim and an intention to relinquish it. At the time

1 the Appellant signed the Settlement Agreement neither he nor the 2 Appellees had knowledge of Jesinoski nor any intention to relinquish 3 rights attendant to it. Hansen v. Oregon Humane Soc., 142 Or. 104, 4 115, 18 P.2d 1036 (1933) held that to be valid and binding, a release 5 must be executed with full knowledge of the import of what is being 6 signed and with the intent to discharge from liability.

7 There was no contemplation of the parties to discharge or 8 relinquish any right the parties were unaware of, specifically the rights 9 of the borrower in Jesinoski. In Patterson vs. Patterson v. American 10 Medical Systems, Inc. 916 P.2d 881 (1996) 141 Or. App. 5, the Court 11 found the same.

12 “The first paragraph describes the litigation that was pending at 13 the time of the settlement and states that plaintiff and defendant had 14 agreed to settle that litigation and "any and all other claims" that 15 plaintiff "has or might have asserted against" defendant. In a 16 subsequent paragraph, plaintiff states that he accepted the settlement 17 amount in full satisfaction of all claims "of every nature and kind 18 whatsoever, known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, past, 19 present or future" that were "in any way related" to his "use of any 20 penile prosthetic device manufactured or sold by AMS, which he has or 21 might have asserted against AMS now or in the future."

22 “It is axiomatic that a release cannot be construed to include 23 claims not within the contemplation of the parties. In the light of the 24 ambiguity in the language of the release and the inferences that can 25

1 flow from the surrounding circumstances of the formation of the 2 agreement, we conclude that the trial court erred when it granted 3 summary judgment. As a matter of law, a genuine issue of material fact 4 exists about whether the 1988 release agreement was intended to 5 release a claim for a product that was not used by plaintiff until 1991.”

6 The Appellant nor the Appellee had no contemplation of releasing 7 any claim under Jesinoski. Therefore, the Settlement Release did not 8 and could not apply to Appellant’s Jesinoski claim.

9
10 III.

12
13 For the foregoing reasons, this Court should reverse the district 14 court’s Judgement for Appellee and direct the court to enter judgment 15 for Appellant.
